Meeting the challenges of a complex survey project with the Trimble SX10 and TBC software

Since acquiring the SX10 over a year ago, it has been used on many Reencon projects including wind farm surveys (with the R10 for integrated surveying), assisting Belfast City Council after the devasting fire at the iconic Primark building and most recently, on a complex survey for a Port Authority.

Operating out of County Down in Northern Ireland, Reencon has over 17 years of experience in the measurement and management sector of the construction and renewable energy industries. More petrochem site adjacent to the sea. The site was home to a number of jetties delivering oil and gas as well as a fire fighting water main supply pipe system which needed replacing. The job was Back at the office, the survey data was processed in less than two days with Tim using Trimble Business Center (TBC) to remove 'noise' such as weeds and tall grass and to create the DTM surface model requested by the out of house modelling company.

Black surfaces are notoriously difficult to capture and Tim was aware that even using the SX10, scan data could be sparse on some areas of the main pipes which were insulated in black rubber tape. Whilst the photos taken with the SX10's VISION technology helped the modelling company, they were not sufficient for them to see everything in context. Tim's solution therefore was to export the entire TBC project as a TDX file which he issued to them along with a copy of the free Trimble RealWorksViewer* so that they had the photos overlaid with the point cloud allowing them to model difficult areas more accurately.

It was TBC to the rescue again when a hiccup in communications meant that the model was created to non-georeferenced coordinates, something that couldn't be easily rectified in its modelling package.
